The backlash against the "smart meter" deployment is an international movement that has grown from grassroots, to State Officials discrediting the "alleged" claims of conservation to ultimately benefit the energy customer.

Just recently NSTAR Energy Company & Western MA Electric Company filed comments with the MA Public Utilities Commission against the deployment of smart meters. [1]

The battle that Nevada activists enacted resulted in Warren Buffet's buyout of NV Energy, including a commitment in their stipulation that the analog meters would be a permanent opt out.

Californians aside from taking on the monolithic PG&E, have smaller cooperatives that seem to feel that they are the demi-god of electrical cooperatives.

Plumas Sierra Rural Electric Cooperative (PSREC) decided to puff their "feathers" and disconnect Joshua Hart's analog meter. Hart the founder and Director of Stop Smart Meters Org., who has been medically advised to avoid any type of radiation emissions from energy meters, requires the continued installation of an analog meter. [2]

Aside from placing Hart's health in jeopardy, PSREC decided that uncalled for surveillance was necessary. PSREC showed up and used telephonic lens cameras to photograph the residence of Hart. Thinking that intimidation was going to influence Hart into accepting the harmful smart meter they wanted to install. [3]
